July 10, published in the London Times, from a European resident in Damascus to a friend in Beirout:

A few minutes after I closed my letters of yesterday an uproar commenced in the street opposite my house. The Modems, men, women and boys, began to assemble, crying out that all should go to the Christian quarter to plunder, burn and massacre, and threatening not to leave a house or a Christian. I went to the street and spoke to some of them, hoping it would come to nothing. It grew rapidly worse. Every one was calling to others not to come without arms, and the women were violently exciting the men. There was some fear expressed of the soldiers, but most declared that the soldiers would not interfere with them. I now found it prudent to take the advice of some of my neighbors, and keep inside my house. The street passing my house is about the shortest road from the Shughoor and the Meedan, the two worst districts in the city. Soon after I went into my house the ruffians began to return from the Christian quarter with burdens of plunder; while the number running toward it were increasing, and threats, imprecations and yells were numerous and loud.

Every sort and size of thing was carried past my house—mares and goats gold and old iron nalls, sitks and cottons, chests large and small, tables, chairs, books and every imaginable article. There was a regular stream of these plunderers past my door till after sunset—nearly five hours. Afterward they came fewer, but they never ceased all night, and with the dawn they again increased. As soon as they had plundered some of the houses they set them on fire. During the night, though there was clear moonlight, the flames presented an unbroken arc of a circle, as viewed from my roof, of more than 70°, extending from a little north of Bab-Shurky to the extreme north point of the Christian quarter. Toward morning the flames also became lower, or less violent, on most specially. There has been an increasing tumult of cries of the fire, of breaking open houses, &c., all mingl CINCINNATI, RICHHOND AND INVIANAPOLIS-7:45

The ship Uriel, Captain Thomas Walker, on her last voyage from Calcutts, fell in with the Portuguese brig-of-war Mondiego, in a sinking condition, she having been caught in a severe gale on her passage from China to Lisbon. In the hight of the storm, and at a great risk, Captain Walker succeeded in rescuing all the officers of the brig, nine in number, and fifty-five of the remaining portion of the brigs company, including two women. Forty-seven of the persons on board the Portuguese brig went down with her, in spite of the exertions of the captain, who lost one boat and had another stoven the attempt to save the entire company, and also split several sails, and sprung the mizzen-mast of his vessel. On Wednesday a letter was received by the Collector of the port of Boston from the State Department at Washington, containing the gratifying intelligence that the Portuguese Government had noticed, in an appropriate and complimentary manner, the efficient and humane services of Captain Walker, and expresses his gratification at being able to state that he has been made by his home government & Knight of the Flower of the Sword.

Frankly Tornado in New York State—Great Damage to Property.—On the 7th inst, a most destructive hurricane swept through the towns of Walworth, Walldon and Sodus, in Wayne County, N. Y., doing frightful damage to every thing in its way. Houses were unroofed, barns demolished, trees torn up by the roots, completely devastating a large section of country. Its path was over two miles wide, and was in nearly a straight line from Walworth to about the center of the town of Sodus, when it suddenly turned toward Lake Outario, which it probably struck not far from Sodus Point. We learn that $2,566,000 have been subscribed in Louisville, to the increased stock of the Commercial Bank, although $250,000 is all that was allotted to that city.

It was ascertained by a census of the State of Maryland, taken in 1782, that there were then in the State 170,688 white inhabitants, and 83,362 negroes.

The south part of Sodus village presents the most frightful spectacle. Extensive tracts of woodland were leveled with the ground, and large orchards completely uprooted. Scarcely a rod of fence is left standing throughout the whole district over which the whirlwind passed. In some cases fenceralls were carried more than thrity rods by the terrific force of the wind. Trees more than two feet in diameter were twisted into splinters. The trees are fallen in all directions, showing that it was a whirlwind, and not a gale. It was accompanied by a tremendous storm of rain and ball.

There is, however, still another mode of receiving intelligence in connection with the Morse lines, besides those already described; namely, by means of the passage of shocks through the system. This, we presume, has often been accomplished by different persons, although we have not been aware of the fact. Mr. Milliken, of the American Telegraph office in Boston, assures us that he once read the greater part of a dispatch as it was passing over the wires between Boston and Portland, and that he heard the Portland operator respond "O K" (all right) to it, while he was seated upon the draw at Mystic River bridge, and held the end of a wire in each hand; thus passing the current through his body, and enabling him to read the letters by the duration and number of shocks which he received.

We have succeeded, upon several occasions, in receiving messages in this manner, whon we have been at a distance from an office, and wished to obtain information in regard to the state of the line.

Not long since, we had been annoyed upon one of our wires by a very bad earth-current, and, none of the repairers being able to find the difficulty, we instituted a search for it. Finally, upon arriving at Neponset, we opened the circuit of the draw, and inquired of the Boston operator, by touching the ends of the wire together in the proper time, if the earth-current was between us and the Boston office, or beyond. This he could at once tell, by my opening the current—disconnecting the wires, if he got none, then the trouble was beyond. This was important for us to know. He replied that he did get an earth-current, when we opened the circuit. We asked if it was very strong. "Yee," he replied, "nearly as strong as when you close."

All this, the reader will understand, we received through our system, and interpreted by the duration and number of the shocks.

Figures Duels in New Orleans.—The New Orleans correspondent of the Charleston (S. C.) Course writes in a late letter that some of the young men of the Greacent City "hive been fighting, or trying to fight duels this hot weather. Yesterday there was affoat a ramor that a most determined affair was to come off between two of our Second District merchants. Rapiers were to be the weapons, and the fight was to be a Toutrane, and was to be continued until one or the other party was slain. But the seconds found means, it is pleasant to know, to compromise the difficulty, and to prevent the bloody engagement contemplated. To-day, I learn, another affaire d'honness iscoming off over at Algiers, the parties being two gentlemen who were prevented from fighting yesterday. On that day two down-town young gentlemen fought with small swords, there liaving been a previous caning affair, of the merits of which I know nothing. One of the combatants was wounded in the sword-arm, and a reconciliation of matters ensued. Hot work this, with the mercury at 90° above zero."

The President and Miss Lans, accompanied by Mrs. Cobb. Secretary Toucey, and a distinguished party, left this city yesterday morning, at about balf-past seven o'clock, by special train for Annapolis, to visit the monster steamship Grest Eastern, new on exhibition there. Arriving at Annapolis at half-past nine o'clock, the President was received at the depot by the officers of the Naval Academy, and conducted to the house of Captain George S. Blake, the worthy superintendent of that establishment.

After a short rest, attended by Capt. Blake and other naval officers, he went on board the screw-tender Ansocatia, commanded by Lieut. T. Scott Fillebrown, which was 1ying at the wharf at the foot of the Academy grounds, which, soon after the President and his party had embarked under a salute of twenty-one guns from the roads, at a distance of about five miles.

When the Anacostia approached the Great Eastern, the latter ran up the American ensign, and fired a salute of twenty-one guns. The President responded by proposing "the health of the illustrious Sovereign and and estimable lady, Queen Victoria," which was drunk with all the honors. Judge Masou, Collector of the port of Baltimore, proposed "the bealth of the officers of the Great Eastern," to which Captain Hall responded in feeling and appropriate language, remarking in conclusion that "he had always, regarded a voyage to the United States as necessary to complete his nautical experience, and that if this, his first visit, should also be his last, he should ever retain the most grateful recollection of it."

The President expressed the hope that this would not be the last vicit of the Great Eastern would become a regular trader between the United States and England, and maintain constant intercourse between both countries for the

After steaming slowly twice round her, the Aucostic ran alongside, and the President and his party went on board the Great Eastern, being received at the gangway by Capt. J. Vine Hall, Hon. Capt. lowest estimate. What, then, are we to allow for the distance of those innumerable stars of the smaller magnitudes, which the telescope discloses to us? If we admit the telescope discloses to us? If we admit the tight of a star of each magnitude to be half that of the magnitude next above it, it will follow that a star of the first magnitude will require to be removed to 362 times its distance to appear no larger then one of the sixteenth. It follows, therefore, that among the countless multitudes of such stars, visible by telescopes, there must be many whose light has taken a thousand years to reach us, and that, when we observe their places and note their changes, we are, in fact, reading only their history of a thousand years' date, thus wonderfully recorded. the assets would nearly meet their liabilities.

Garibaldi upon entering Messina was received with great enthusiasm. Sale of Distinguished Autographs in Paris.—There was a public sale some days ago in Paris, of autograph letters and signatures of noted characters, some of whom have passed away, and some still living. Although the mania for collecting autographs is as strong here, perhaps, as any where in the world, the prices, on this occasion, were exceedingly low. Original letters of the post Chateaubriand, and the celebrated monk, Father Lacordaire, brought only five francs each, one of Genard de Norval, the talented young anthor, who committed suicide a few years ago, was sold for four france, while the signatures of Arago, La Bedoyere, Prince Czartosyski, Orfile, the Countess Guiccioli, (Byron's chere assie), Marshals Vaillant, Niel and Regnault de St. Jean d'Angely, were knocked down at half a dollar each. Guizot's name brought forty cents, and Cousin's twenty-five cents. Not very complimentary to the great folks.
